W.I. honours local woman

Cathy Lasby, of Rockwood, has been recognized by the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario (FWIO) for her dedication to agriculture at The Royal Winter Fair.

Lasby was presented with the prestigious Excellence in Agriculture Award by FWIO president Christine Reaburn and the Royal's vice-president Don Rickard at the recent fair.

Lasby's life has always included exhibiting and volunteering at The Royal. Her 4-H career included competing in eight annual Queen's Guineas Competitions, was a founding committee member of, and is current chair, of the Knob Hill Farms National Junior Beef Heifer Show at The Royal. She has been a member of the Youth Activities Committee at The Royal, and now represents the Canadian Hereford Association on The Royal's Beef Cattle Committee. Lasby will also co-chair the first National Hereford Show, an event considered by many as an extravaganza that has yet to be duplicated by another breed association. As well Lasby continues to work with youth and is dedicated to the advancement of rural youth across Canada.

FWIO is an organization of women dedicated "to better the lives of women and families through personal growth and community action." Women are encouraged to join, as new members are most welcome.

GTW opens addition

Georgetown Terminal Warehouse (GTW) president Brenda Sissett (left) was joined by her mother (and GTW CEO) Norma Elliott and her brother Ross Elliott as they cut the cake officially opening their new addition at a reception recently. The 32,000 square foot addition (featuring a 32 foot ceiling) gives the Armstrong Avenue business a total of 82,000 square feet of storage to better serve their needs. Until recently, the company had warehouse space rented in five different buildings. The original GTW building was opened by the late John Elliott in February of 1978.
