Student exchange groups offer trips abroad for teens

Several student exchange organizations are currently seeking students to participate in upcoming international exchanges.

Student Travel Schools Inc. (STS), a 30-year-old non-profit educational organization based in Waterloo, gives high school students a chance to travel to other countries to learn another language. STS welcomes all students, between the ages of 15 and 18, with an average of 65 per cent or better. There are 15 destinations to choose from including Australia, South Africa, New Zealand and most countries in Europe— however Switzerland, France, German and Spain have language requirements.

Application deadline for next summer's departure is Dec. 31. For information call

Julia Lubczynski, 1-800-265-5316.

Canada World Youth is a 30-year-old Canadian non-profit organization with an application deadline of Dec. 1 for 2001 programs. Programs include: youth exchange programs for 17-20 year olds for four to seven months in Asia, Africa, Latin America or the Caribbean volunteering at local communities, farms or small businesses. In Central and Eastern European exchange students focus on civil society and democratic development and NetCorps for 19-24 years are information technology internships with local organizations where students research the impact of technology on community development.

For more information call 1-888-421-9761 or (416) 596-9702 or check out their

Web site at www.cwy-jcm.org

Nacel Canada Inc. is a non-profit organization offering scholarships to study abroad for a year or a semester. There are 20 scholarships for students, aged 15-17, available for 2001 with the application deadline set at Dec. 1. Peel/Halton residents should contact co-ordinator Shirley Cairns, (905) 844-4392 or 1-800-665-6223.

World Heritage, a U.S. based group, offers high school students an opportunity to spend an academic semester, a year or summer holiday in Europe, Asia, North or South America, New Zealand, Australia or South Africa. Students or families wanting more information should call Angela Grant, (705) 745-4147 or Mary at 1-800-888-9040, or check out their Web site at www.world-heritage.org
