Halton Women's Place

More than seventy active volunteers support Halton Women's Place. They fall into two categories; residential or shelter volunteers and committee volunteers.

Shelter volunteers, at both locations, might help babysit the children, engage in activities with children such as story time, music and art or help to sort clothing.

Committee volunteers include the Board of Directors, the Fund Raising Committee, the HWP Business Advisory Committee and the Planned Giving Committee.

All of these volunteers are important. Halton Women's Place would like to salute the wonderful volunteers, past and present who have made this organization a safe alternative for victims of domestic violence.

THANK YOU

North Halton Literacy Guild celebrates 15th year of service

Monday, April 23 is the start of volunteer week in this International Year of the Volunteer, but North Halton Literacy Guild (NHLG) owes 15 years of appreciation to its numerous volunteers.

This is also the 15th anniversary of NHLG, and a special celebration is being planned for the annual general meeting on June 18, and anyone who has ever volunteered for the Guild is welcome to participate. To be sure you're on the guest list, you're asked to call 905-873-2200.

If it weren't for the many volunteers,

North Halton Literacy Guild would not exist. Although government funding is received for three part-time staff members, it is nowhere near enough to pay for all the work that must get done, and the extra efforts that manage to be achieved each year. In fact, government funding depends on the Guild receiving a significant portion of its budget from community support.

While the volunteers who provide literacy tutoring are the backbone of the Read*Spell*Write program, helping adults to gain basic skills in reading, writing, arithmetic and computer use, there are many other valuable ways that people help the Guild: generous annual donations of time, money, goods and services.

The past 15 years have seen a lot of people giving their time, energy and resources to the Guild, making possible significant growth and improvements. Exciting new developments will be announced in the coming weeks, and volunteers and supporters will want to keep in touch to celebrate the events of this anniversary year.
