Halton police plan RIDE spot checks

There is a good chance area drivers will be stopped at a RIDE spot check somewhere in the region this long weekend as Halton Regional Police Service kicks off its annual RIDE program.

Sgt. Trevor Hay said RIDE spot checks will be set up throughout Halton Friday and Saturday night.

He said while the RIDE program, which targets drunk drivers, is in effect year-round, police step up their efforts from the Victoria Day weekend through New Year's Day.

Halton Police were one of many police services to receive extra funding from the province to conduct RIDE programs.

Fence bylaw warrants discussion, says councillor

Noting the town does not have a fence bylaw restricting height, Georgetown Councillor Ron Chatten suggested at a recent meeting that council at least have a discussion about it.

"There has been a concern of erection of fences over six feet in the town," said Chatten. In his ward (4), for example, one constituent has objected to the 10-ft. height of a neighbour's fence. The resident's complaint was recently featured in The Independent & Free Press.

He has asked town clerk Karen Landry to obtain fence bylaws from surrounding municipalities, and make them available to councillors to read.

"Then I think it would be time to have a discussion to see what direction this town would like to proceed."
