Hwy. 407 to benefit all of Halton— Savoline

The Highway 407 extension, which officially opened Monday, will benefit Halton Region in many ways. "Traffic issues are key for Halton, so we're very pleased that the opening day has arrived," said Regional Chairman Joyce Savoline. The new 407 will ease traffic congestion on the QEW and other local routes and it will also strengthen Halton's strategic connection to a number of key regional economic hubs such as the GTA, Hamilton, Kitchener-Waterloo and the Niagara bi-national region.

"A strong transportation network will help us to build on our position in the centre of one of North America's most important trade corridors and consumer marketplaces," said Savoline. Expansion of road capacity is just one element of Halton's transportation strategy. Transit alternatives have always been a critical component for the region. "We successfully secured a number of carpool lots along the length of the 407 extension, and we continue to pursue the expansion of GO Transit service in the area," said Savoline.
