Local woodworker becomes contributing editor to magazine

Canada's woodworking and do-it-yourself magazine, Canadian Home Workshop, has appointed Hendrik Varju, a local fine furniture designer and builder, to become its newest contributing editor.

Varju will have an opportunity to write articles about furniture projects he has completed with an eye to helping readers build those projects themselves. Typical articles include photographs, plans and materials lists.

"I am looking forward to sharing my knowledge with others and reaching a broader audience," said Varju. "Helping amateur woodworkers take a leap forward with their techniques and projects has always appealed to me."

"Because of my passion for wood and the work that I do, I have always enjoyed talking about my work and explaining how I do things. That is why I got into the teaching aspect and why I also want to teach through writing."

Varju, who operates Passion for Wood in Erin, has also expanded his one-on-one woodworking hourly lessons at his workshop to a 40-hour weeklong course. The student builds a solid black cherry side table with tapered, fluted legs. Varju teaches the student about furniture design, wood science, use of woodworking machines, finishing, etc.

For more information, call Varju at Passion for Wood, (519)853-2027 or e-mail, info@passionforwood.com or check out his Web site, www.passionforwood.com.
