Art show and sale features children's work unique art exhibit and sale of children's artwork, Beyond Crayons, will be held this Sunday, Aug. 26. Halton Hills artist Colleen Salzsauler has been running a free art program for children between the ages of 6-10, this summer.

"I decided to do this for creative kids who couldn't afford lessons or simply didn't have the opportunity to take them," said Salzsauler. "Children get a small amount of art instruction in school but not much one-on-one. I remember how much I would have loved to have someone show me how to draw when I was young but that didn't happen. So I decided to start this program for kids in the same situation."

Four other artists have been helping Salzsauler teach various media such as sculpture, painting and printmaking.

The show will be held at Salzsauler's home, 12921 on Five Sideroad, at the corner of Trafalgar Rd.

Williams Mill Gallery features two new artists

The Williams Mill Gallery presents Variations, an exhibition of the recent work of artists Louise Laroche and Andrew Young.

Louise Laroche is an acclaimed visual artist whose work has been exhibited widely across Canada and the United States. Her most recent exhibition was at the Saber Gallery on Fifth Avenue, New York City. Her monoprints and collages, rich in colour and texture, are reminiscent of the landscape, Athough he has experimented with several other art forms and media, Andrew Young's first love is sculpture. He works primarily in stone, each piece growing out of the natural form of the material.

The exhibition which opened Wednesday, runs until September 23. The Gallery, located at 515 Main St., Glen Williams, is open Wednesday through Sunday, noon to 5 p.m.
