Brothers eye karate gold

Two years ago Rick Read watched as the Canadian team dominated the World Karate Association continuous point sparring championships.

That would have been great— except he was competing for Germany. Having since moved to Canada, both 13-year-old Rick and his brother Robin, 10, are hoping to contribute to Canada maintaining control of the sport. The Georgetown brothers are headed in the right direction after making the Canadian team that will compete at the world championships August 20-25 in Tuscany, Italy.

Robin won the 30kg class at the Canadian championships in Ottawa, going undefeated in eight matches over three days despite injuring his toe in his first fight.

Meanwhile, an old nemesis prevented Rick from joining his brother atop the podium. Rick's clubmate, Maxim Tchenor, defeated him in the 35kg division final. The two have a long-standing rivalry dating back to the 2000 world championships, when Tchenor defeated Rick in the semifinals. Rick went on to earn the bronze medal while Tchenor took the gold. Now Rick hopes to turn the tables.

"Technically, I think Rick is the better fighter but he (Tchenor) is very defensive and so quick and so good at countering," said Rick's dad, Mark.

At Canadians, there were three separate rounds and each time Rick and Tchenor met in the finals. Though Rick felt he earned more points than he was awarded, he knows he will have to vary his kicks more in order to finally topple his foe.

Robin is also looking to add variety to his attack. "In Germany, I mainly kicked but I'll have to use my hands to go after points."

Robin cruised through the Canadian championship but is expecting much tougher competition at his first world championships.

Both are looking forward to competing for Canada, which has been the most successful team at each of the last six world championships. The brothers are also looking for sponsorships to help them make the trip to Italy.
