

At a cost of $1.5M Board approves hiring of 54 Educational Assistants

Halton District School Board trustees at their regular board meeting Wednesday approved a motion to hire 54 new Educational Assistants (EA) from its list of qualified professionals.

The approval means 27 high-needs students who are currently not attending school, or who attend on a limited basis because they don't have EA support, will be going back to class full-time.

It also means an expenditure of about $1.5-million that trustees will have to account for when balancing next year's budget.

"We need EAs, we need support to keep our high-needs kids in school," Dusty Papke, education director said. "If we can't find off-setting savings and if the ministry is not willing to assist us, then there is the potential that we will have a year-end deficit. Whatever that deficit is we are responsible for dealing with it in our next budget."

Papke said a potential deficit does not affect the board's legal requirement to pass a balance budget for the 2002-03 school year.

That budget was passed in June by trustees as per Ministry of Education guidelines.

"The requirement is that a board pass a balanced budget which we did," Papke said. "But quite often things come up during the year and that's what this is."

The education director said he didn't know how the board is going to come up with the funds to account for the hirings. He said there is a chance the ministry will kick in some cash to pay for the EAs but that is not the expectation.

"Hypothetically, sure (the ministry might help pay)," he said.

"Certainly we've made them aware of our situation. They recognize the difficulties that we face."

Halton Hills Trustee and board chair Ethel Gardiner said trustees had no choice but to pass the motion.

She said the right for all children in Halton to attend school is paramount over finding the money to pay for the new EAs.

"It's unbelievable that any board of education should have to go through this to get money for special education kids," she said. "If we end up in a deficit at the end of the year then so be it. Hopefully, this will be some relief for students, families and staff."

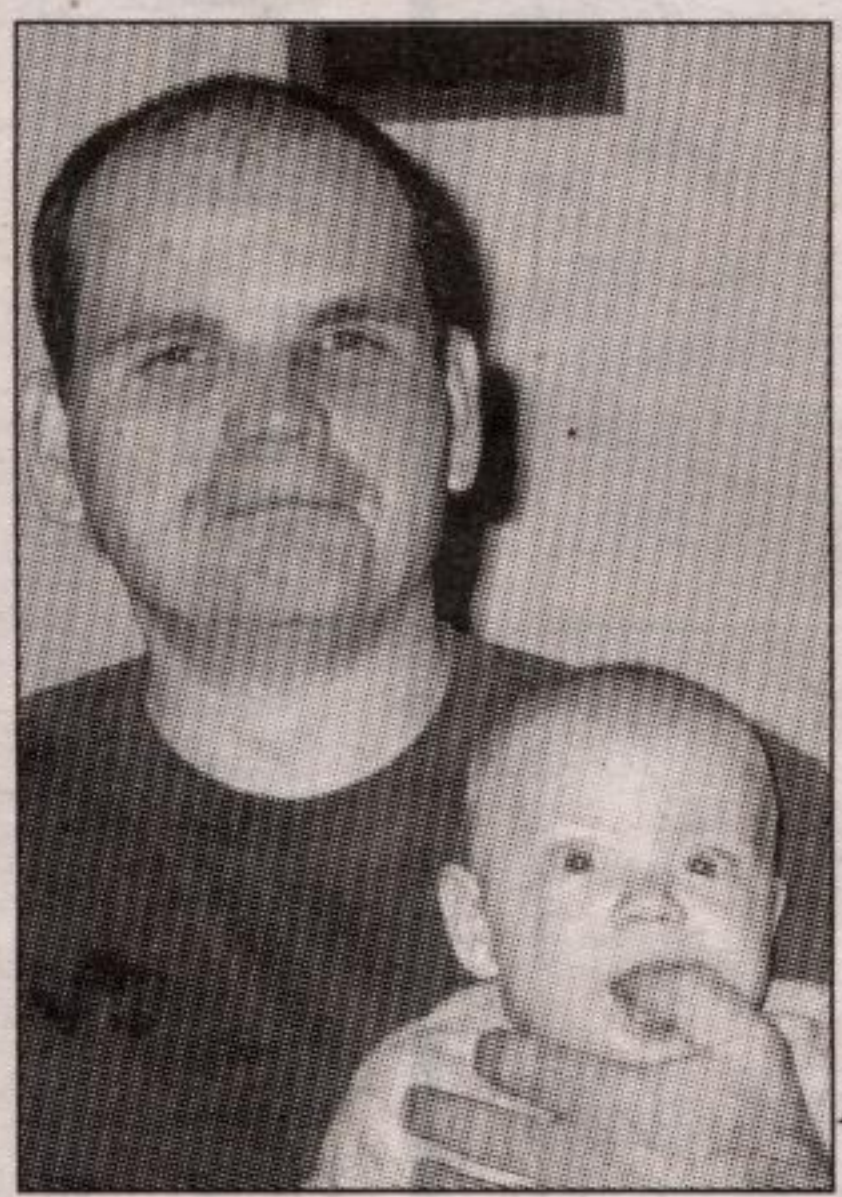

Papke said the board already has a list of qualified EAs who could be interviewed for the positions.

Forty-one of the new EAs will work with high-needs students, while 13 are earmarked for Junior and Senior Kindergarten classes with more than 24 students in them.

With the board approving the motion Wednesday, Papke said interviews can take place immediately with the hope of getting EAs and special needs students into the schools in the region as soon as possible.

—By Robb Swybrous, special

36 36 36 36 36 36 36 36 36

Happy 36th
Birthday
to James Edward Pellart
on October 25th

Love from your wife
Franceen and 6 month old son Matthew

36 36 36 36 36 36 36 36 36

Bell barbecue boosts Foundation

The William Osler Foundation recently received a $1,100 donation from Bell World after holding a barbecue at the store, with products donated by Maple Lodge Farms. On hand for the presentation were (from left) Bell World sales staffers Andrew Durham, Chris Kukkonen and Aaron Scarlett, manager Martin Dillon, William Osler director of annual giving K.C. Carruthers and Graeme Goebelle, of the Foundation Development Council.

Photo by Ted Brown

The Great Pumpkin Patch

SIDEWALK

SALE

7 DAYS OF SAVINGS SO...

GREAT

IT'S SCARY! SAVE: Mon - Sun. Oct 21st - 27th, 2002

STONE ROAD MALL

150 STYLISH BOUTIQUES, SHOPS & SERVICES

ZELLERS * SEARS * CHAPTERS * CINEPLEX ODEON

435 Stone Road, Guelph * SHOP: Mon to Fri.: 10:00 - 9:00, SAT.: 9:30 - 9:00, SUN: NOON - 5:00