Police issue $25,000 reward in hopes of finding man's killer

In an effort to get some new leads, Halton Regional Police are offering a $25,000 reward in the Paavo (Paul) Henttonen murder case.

Halton Police announced Tuesday the reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the May 17 stabbing death of the 54-year-old Georgetown man.

"There's not a lot of new information coming in," said police spokesperson Sgt. Val Hay. "We're hoping this will spark someone's memory."

Brampton resident Melodie Henttonen, the murder victim's estranged wife, said, "we're really happy that they have gone ahead with that (the reward)."

"The hardest thing to deal with is it really hasn't gone any further," she said. "It seems unbelievable to us that someone can commit a crime like murder, and there are no witnesses and no one has divulged anything."
