Globe's Evita opens next week

Nicole Latham prepares for her title role in Georgetown Globe Productions' Evita which opens next week. During a costume parade recently, Latham hams it up with Chris Burke (Juan Peron), left, and Neil Salinas (Che Guevara). The musical opens at the John Elliott Theatre on Thursday, Nov 21, 8 p.m. with a special two-week run of selected performances until Nov. 30, including a matinee on Sunday, Nov. 24. Tickets are available at the John Elliott Theatre Box Office at 905-877-3700 for $18 for all performances or $15 for children 12 & under. Photo by Shawn McAlpine

Correction

A story on Artcast Inc., which appeared on the Eye on Art page in the November 8 Independent & Free Press contained a typographical error.

The story should have read, "Through its gallery division, Art Bronzes International Inc., Artcast is able to offer fine art limited edition bronze sculptures at affordable prices".

As well, a story on Artisans Attic also contained a typographical error. The story should have read, "Jewelry created from hand-crafted new and vintage glass beads, pearls and semi-precious stones".

The Independent & Free Press regrets the errors.

New exhibit opens

Solstice, a new exhibit featuring wearable art artisans Marie Payne and Josette Luyckx and sterling silver jewelry artisan Janice Smith, opens with a reception at Williams Mill Creative Arts Studio and Gallery in Glen Williams tomorrow (Sat.), 2 to 5 p.m.
