Firm donates rehab unit to fire department

Thanks to a donation from a local business, Halton Hills Fire Department has a new rehab unit.

Recognizing the department's need for a new unit, Ray Johnson of Ray Johnson and Associates initiated a sponsorship agreement that provided the fire department with an allotment of $16,000 for the Co-operator's-sponsored unit.

The money was used to purchase and equip a self-sufficient trailer designed to provide rehabilitation and medical monitoring for emergency service workers at fire incidents, and to attend community safety events.

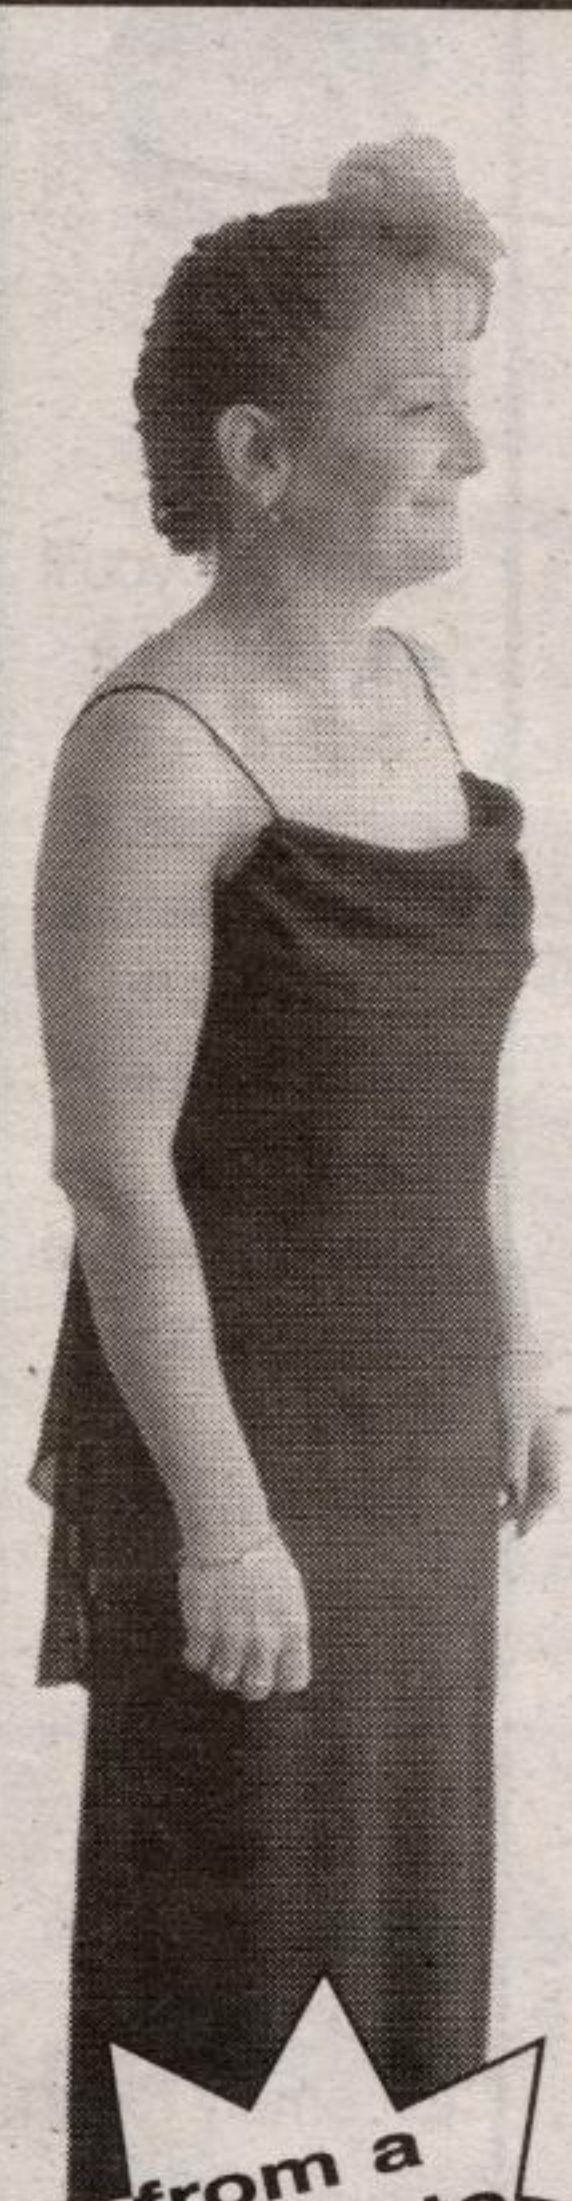

The unit will provide seating and shelter, and includes misting fans, first aid equipment and pre-packaged meals. Kitchen cabinets donated by Ikea Canada have been installed in the unit that is expected to be put into service in early January.

"This partnership is another example of Mr. Johnson's commitment to the community," said Halton Hills Fire Department Chief Officer Brian Ellsworth. "Ray has been a great friend to the fire service and the community. In conjunction with the Co-operators, he has sponsored numerous fire prevention, life safety and fund-raising campaigns that enables us to better protect and educate our citizens."

Volunteer firefighter Paul Yates will primarily staff the rehab unit.

"I found the program to be fast and safe. I could definitely see results in a hurry. The inch loss was very encouraging. It was amazing how fast the inches changed. I feel a lot better about myself than before. I used to think people stared at me because I was so overweight; now I feel like they are looking at me because I look good!"
