Recreation centre construction on track

The town's newest recreation centre, Gellert Community Centre, is on track to be open for business by March 2004.

Director of Recreation and Parks Terry Alyman provided Halton Hills council with an update at last week's meeting. He told them the project is 20 per cent complete, with steel now erected above the pool area.

Planned is a 33,750 sq. ft. building with a six-lane 25-metre collegiate-size pool with adjoining play pool and flume slide, a hot tub, sauna, three change rooms, offices, and 250-seating banquet hall/multi-purpose space with kitchen, plus a smaller multi-purpose meeting room. As well, the town recently added a $200,000 park service facility for operations and maintenance of the centre and the surrounding park. Development charges and SuperBuild funding are paying for the majority of the cost for the $11.3 million building.

At the June 9 council meeting, a finance consultant will present a business plan for its future operation.

While the town will hire most of the staff to run the facility, some services will be contracted out such as: catering, vending, security, window cleaning, HVAC/mechanical maintenance, and floor-mat service. The Gellert Community Centre, which is being designed to host a variety of social functions including weddings, will be an alcohol-licensed facility.

Come Clean With Us

Now You See It. Now You Don't...

Winter is over. You start to pack away your warm and woolly items and pull out those lighter weight fabrics in anticipation of spring. "But what's this? Is it some cruel joke? I know these clothes were clean when I put them away," you say to yourself. "But now they are covered with ugly brown stains."

"Invisible stains" are caused by foods and beverages, perspiration, and hair sprays, which, when spilled, originally caused only a damp area on your clothes.

For instance, if you spill ginger ale on your clothing and blot up the stain, it seems to disappear. But, in fact, the stain is still there and with heat and time, the stain will oxidize and turn brown.

Oxidized stains can also appear after you store your garments in a warm closet or in the attic during the summer.

Barragers Cleaners offers the following tips to avoid permanent staining by "invisible" and tannin stains.

Have the article cleaned as soon as possible after it is stained. Once a stain is set, it's much harder to get out, if it will come out at all.

Always have garments cleaned before storing them. Not only could the "invisible" stains become visible during storage, but food and beverage stains, even "invisible" stains, are an insect's invitation to munch on clothing.
