For 12th season Children's Chorus accepting new singers

The Georgetown Children's Chorus is registering new singers from the ages 5-18 for its 12th season.

The choir features 180 children's voices under the direction of A. Dale Wood and rehearsals begin Tuesday, September 9, for its annual Christmas and spring concerts. This December the children will sing traditional Christmas favourites and in April will perform the sounds of Broadway at the John Elliott Theatre.

The choir was founded in 1992 and there are many teens already celebrating their 12th season this year. In July 2003, the choir traveled to Whistler on a choir exchange and has also performed in Europe, England and Wales and in special concerts at the Ford Centre for the Performing Arts, Ontario Place and at the Living Arts Centre in Mississauga.

The Georgetown Children's Chorus sings choral arrangements of popular music as well as some more traditional pieces. Most parents are gratified to see their children develop their vocal skills and the discipline of performing on stage. The kids learn a variety of music and older kids perform complex harmonies.

Any child or teen that likes to sing and is interested in this experience should call Sharon at 905-877-6841, to obtain further registration information.

GLT performers hard at work

Momentum is picking up at Georgetown Little Theatre (GLT) Studio where rehearsals are under way in preparation for GLT's third annual One-Act Play Festival, Sept. 11-13.

There are more than 50 actors taking part in four one-act plays - not to mention a large contingent of backstage and pre-production volunteers. The four plays are:

- Competition Piece, three groups of actors from different high schools work from stage one of the acting business to see the outcome of their work

- The Furies, daughters of night are out to pursue a murderer, being granted the final decision by Athena, daughter of Zeus.

- A Case for Two Detectives, two classical armchair detectives come to hilarious conclusions to a murder

- Father, Father Daniel struggles with ideas to modernize the church.

The festival will be held at the John Elliott Theatre. For tickets, $10, call the box office, 905-877-3700.
