Make your next filter change a smooth one

Changing a vehicle's engine oil and filter is sure to save motorists time and money from trips to the service station. FRAM filter experts say that with the right tools and knowledge, it's an easy project for any driver — even those who have never done it.

First, do-it-yourselfers should gather all the items needed to complete the job. Most local automotive stores will have a wide variety of oil and filter products, as well as jack stands, mechanic's gloves and clean-up supplies. For best results, use premium products. Check part numbers twice while at the store, to ensure you have the right product. These numbers are specific to the make, model and year of the vehicle and although many sizes look alike, they are not appropriate for certain applications. The oil and filter should be changed after the engine has reached normal operating temperatures. This ensures that most of the old oil and dirt are removed during the oil change.

Before beginning, the engine should be turned off and the emergency brake activated. When using jack stands, do-it-yourselfers should make absolutely sure the car can't roll or fall. Following these simple guidelines before your next oil change will save you time, money and most of all, aggravation.
