Voters seek answers on schools, health care and hospitals

"We will commit to all the money that Dr. Rozanski recommended go into the educational system," said Chudleigh.

To a round of applause Jackson said "we need to take the politics out of education" and give it back to teachers and school boards. He added the NDP believes $2.1 billion needs to be reinvested back into education.

"What the FCP will do...is to remove this confrontational aspect (fighting about funding formulas) from education by having parents choose the school of their choice and money will follow that decision," said Gori.

A woman with cancer who said she had to wait five months to start treatment, asked what is being done for cancer patients.

Chudleigh said his government is committed to putting $1 billion into research for breast and prostate cancer over the next 10 years.

He added his government has developed seven new cancer care centres, so people don't have to travel as far.

"The fact you had to wait five months for treatment surprises me, that is not acceptable," said Chudleigh, who added he would be glad to take her case forward to make sure she gets treatment in the recommended period of time.

"I'm truly astonished your member does not know about the wait times for cancer care," said Sullivan, who added a co-ordinated approach to cancer care is needed.

Gori was pleased when someone asked a question about proportional representation because he said he has been working on that issue since 1990.

"We would propose a referendum on the issue and specifically our position is that we need a system that is more proportional," said Gori.

A woman asked Chudleigh to explain the secrecy and hurry of the two P3 (Public Private Partnership) hospital deals in Brampton (Brampton Campus of William Osler Health Centre) and Ottawa. She said she believes it's illegal they are concluding during a campaign and wanted to know how much the taxpayer is going to be on the hook for, and for how long.

"The money that we put into bricks and mortar doesn't necessarily have to come from taxpayers in order to get the best service or the best deal," said Chudleigh. He added patients will still pay for treatment at the Brampton hospital with their OHIP cards.

"This is the issue of public versus private," said NDP candidate Jackson. "If you want to have a private system for profit where does profit go— into somebody's pocket."

"We will not enter into P3 deals," said Sullivan. "There is no transparency and accountability."

Another audience member asked why immigration was coming up as an issue in the election.

"One of the most disturbing things I've seen occur in this campaign is the approach of the Progressive Conservatives to people who are making new homes in Canada," said Sullivan. She said they talk about immigration in only one section of their platform— crime.

The audience applauded when she said she believes in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and the need for respect for all.

"No one is being targeted with our policies on immigration," said Chudleigh. He said PCs want the same deal Quebec has with Ottawa— approval for immigrants that come into their province.

He said they want to have the types of immigrants with the skill sets and in the job categories needed to "build this country."

Jackson said he was concerned when immigration policy drifts into a provincial political platform.

"Clearly to mind fear-mongering is afoot," said Jackson.

Chudleigh was also asked by an audience member what he's done regarding the CN application for intermodal terminal in south Milton.

"I believe it should take place in industrial lands, not agriculturally zoned lands," said Chudleigh.

He said because of the federal rail act CN can set up an intermodal yard wherever they want.

"I've been fighting it, I had meetings with them. There's nothing the provincial government can do."

He said he suggested to CN that locating in that area would be a bad public relations move.
