Food for Thought...

The RBC Financial Group joined with The Food for Thought Community partners Program to promote their program which provides healthy snacks and education for school kids across the Region. RBC decorated their branches with paper apples and nutrition displays to build awareness of the program. On hand to check out the decorations at the Main Street Branch of the Royal Bank were (from left) branch manager Emiliana Walls, Halton Hills Mayor Kathy Gastle, Food For Thought Co-ordinator Gayle Cruikshank and regional manager of Breakfast for Learning, Darlene Edmonds.

Bogus canvassers

Kay Bigg of the local Parkinson's Support Group is warning Halton Hills residents that there have been reports of people soliciting donations.

Bigg said the Parkinson's Society of Canada does not solicit door-to-door and that anyone coming to canvassing door-to-door is not associated with the organization.
