Raging Grannies to support AI cause

Come see the Raging Grannies on May 13 at the Georgetown Market Place mall and make a difference for women everywhere. The Halton Hills chapter of Amnesty International (AI) will be there—next to the food court—between 4 and 8 p.m. with information about AI's worldwide campaign to end violence against women, and a petition to support the cause.

The Raging Grannies of Halton will appear after 6 p.m.

According to AI, violence against women is the world's most pervasive human rights offence, and it is the violation most often ignored. At every moment women and girls around the world are assaulted, threatened, raped, mutilated, and killed. In Ontario alone, between three and six women are murdered each month by their current or former male partner. Last year the women's shelter in Milton received over 8,000 calls; and of these calls 95 were dealing with severe crisis situations. That's almost three crisis calls a day just in Milton.

For the entire month of May the local Amnesty International group in Halton Hills will be focusing attention on the kinds of violence women encounter around the world in an attempt to end the silence, and end the violence. Letters supporting this initiative are ready to be signed at Foodstuffs and Great Expectations in Georgetown, Canoe Country in Norval, and Meadowlarke Stables in Brampton.

AI-Halton Hills meets the second Wednesday of every month (May 14) at St. John's United Church in Georgetown; meetings begin at 7:30 p.m. For information call 905-877-1994.
