As part of Road Safety Week Halton officers to crack down on bad drivers

Halton Regional Police officers will be cracking down on impaired drivers, speeders and others who put passengers and drivers at risk next week during Canada Road Safety Week.

The week, which runs Monday (May 17) through Monday, May 24, is a national campaign to make Canada's roads the safest in the world, and is designed to remind people that an essential part of the police enforcement job is to save lives and reduce injuries on roadways.

The week has been chosen because it includes the first summer long weekend, when more people travel and traffic crashes are more frequent.

"The death and pain that results from carelessness behind the wheel can be prevented," said Staff Sgt. Andrew Fletcher of Halton Regional Police Regional Traffic Unit. "Police agencies across the country are collaborating on this project because they have seen more than enough tragedy and because they know that the involvement of the driving public is essential to achieve safer streets and highways."

In Halton so far this year there have been eight deaths resulting from auto accidents.

Throughout the week, Halton officers, will use zero tolerance, and target impaired driving, people who aren't using seat-belts, intersection safety and unsafe speeds.

Canada Road Safety Week is sponsored by Transport Canada and endorsed by police across Canada as part of Road Safety Vision 2010, which has a goal of making Canada's roads the safest by 2010.
