

Acton woman among five charged after police raid Burlington farmhouse

An Acton woman has been charged following a raid of a Burlington farmhouse Wednesday.

Officers from Halton Regional Police's drug and morality bureau, along with the canine unit, executed a search warrant at the Appleby Line house.

Officers found 80 marijuana plants growing on the property, 1.5 pounds of manicured marijuana in a car on the property, two digital scales and packaging material inside the residence.

While officers were searching the property, a vehicle arrived with two occupants. Officers arrested the two people and searched them and their vehicle.

Twenty-eight individually wrapped packages of marijuana, with a total weight of approximately four ounces, and two individually wrapped packages of cannabis resin, with a total weight of eight grams, were located.

Five people were charged as a result, including Theresa Anne

Medland, 19, of Acton. She is charged with possession for purpose of trafficking.

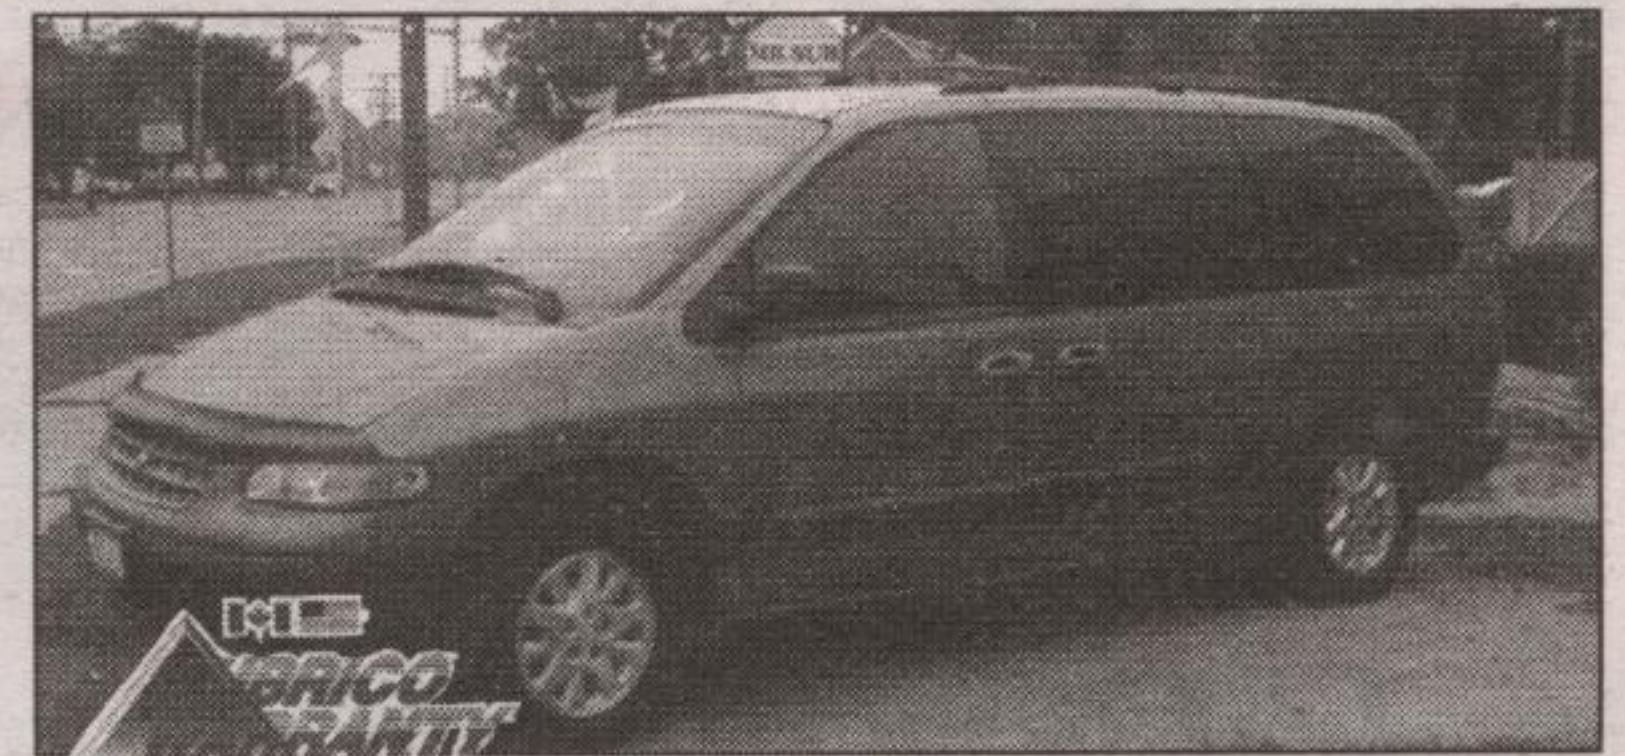

Facing the same charge are Kim Reidpath, 36, and Heather Adam, 20, of Burlington.

Luke Reidpath, 25, of Milton faces two charges of possession for purpose of trafficking and Rodney Vukoja, 37, of Burlington faces a charge of possession of a controlled substance.

Police are continuing their investigation and anticipate making one more arrest.
