Innerscapes offers a Cornucopia this weekend

Artists Beatrice Dumbreck, Herta Hajek, Tiziana Manierka, George Perdue, Eileen Simpson, and Jan Zimmerman— all members of Innerscapes— open their gallery for their autumn show, Cornucopia.

Showcasing the varied styles and mediums of these six artists, the show is open weekends from September 25 to October 11, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Innerscapes Gallery is located at 13261 Tenth Line Albert's Wharf by George Perdue, oil on canvas.

(north of Georgetown). Notably, all six artists have recently had pieces accepted in the Headwaters Arts Festival Juried show, Home & Heart.

This show is open weekends, Oct 2-11, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the SGI Canada Caledon Centre, located at 20490 Porterfield Rd. west, in Alton.

Please call 905-702-0972 days or 905-873-2178 evenings for details on both shows.

for not taking action, while Jennie convinces guilt-ridden Melissa the rape can't go unchallenged.

The issues are strongly presented by the teens. As Rick justifies his actions with logic like "when a girl says 'no', she really means 'yes'", the audience can see how easily date rape can be downplayed and go unchecked.

Pieces, directed by Doug Feggans, illustrates a volatile relationship between a father and his son, as they are accidentally locked in the attic, among a collection of items ('pieces of life') collected by their deceased wife/mother.

A powerful interaction between narrow-minded Ben Tyler (Pat McManus) and his son Alfred (Paul Stodolny) illustrates the difficulties families have dealing with death and estrangement between parents and their offspring. The play certainly left the viewer with a number of deep thoughts on parent-child relationships.

The Ugly Duckling, a fairy tale, was directed by Skytree Smith. The king (Roscoe Peterson) and queen (Jacquie Sullivan) are panicking that they'll never marry off daughter Camilla (Janelle Bartosek) as she is 'too plain' and no suitor would have her.

The chancellor (Gary McIlvarey) arranges a meeting between Camilla and Prince Simon (Matthew Coles) hoping that he'll marry her.

The king and queen also take a bold step, introducing the more attractive maid Dulcibella (Lindsey Owens) as their daughter, hoping to make a switch at the altar with a veiled Camilla.

In the meantime, Simon has his own plan as he and his man servant Carlo (Iain Page) switch places, since he fears no princess would ever want him. Simon and Camilla inadvertently meet as he's sneaking into the palace, and after divulging their secrets to each other, they fall in love.

The play is predictable, and the action drags. It takes forever for the plot to advance, yet the actors give strong performances. The set and costumes are outstanding, giving the play visual appeal.

The final play was the whimsical Sure Thing, directed by Hope Hanson.

Centering around Bill (Kevin Liley) and Betty (Marissa Winter) meeting in a coffee shop, the dialogue is the strength of this play as the two swap lines, like replaying a tape, interspersed with a 'ding' signaling the 'reset'.

The play is incredibly entertaining, as one anticipates what 'changes' the next dialogue will entail. Utilizing only a café table and two chairs, the set is spartan yet effective. One must applaud the talent of Winter and Liley for keeping their repeating lines straight.

The One Act Play Festival is a means of attracting new blood into the GLT fold, by encouraging new actors, directors and stage crews of all ages to become involved.

If this year's presentation is any indication, the group should have a whole new roster of actors to draw on for the coming year's playbill.
