Play it safe on Halloween

When my parents decided to immigrate to Canada I was all for it because the English do not celebrate Halloween.

This particular cultural event is purely for children... dressing up, staying up late and enough candy to last for six months! What's not to like from a kid's point of view? There are a few safety tips that parents and children need to keep in mind when Halloween approaches.

When choosing a costume it should be bright and reflective. You can buy reflective tape, and glow sticks at several stores in town to attach to dark costumes. Masks can obstruct a child's vision. Consider using makeup instead.

Children, and adults who accompany them, should have flashlights. Check the batteries before you leave home.

Parents should discuss appropriate behaviour, which is especially important if older children are going without an adult, or with a friend's parent. Staying with a group is a good idea. Smaller children should always be accompanied. Older children should let their parents know which route they will take, and what time they will be home. Only go to homes with a porch light on. A dark house usually signals that the resident does not wish to participate in Halloween. Never go into a home to get a treat. Children should stay on lit streets and use the sidewalk when possible, or walk on the street facing traffic.

Parents should talk to their children about traffic. Let them know that not all drivers will see them in the dark.

Reinforce to children that they should not eat any candy until their parents have checked it over.

Have a safe and happy Halloween.
