Letters to the editor

Treatment of cafeteria staff 'callous'

Dear editor,

I just want to comment on how appalled I was by the cold, callous, shabby treatment of the women fired from Georgetown District High School cafeteria.

Hats off to the two former students who took the time to write to your paper. They couldn't have said it better. My very dear friend is one of those women who had worked there for 26 years. A very kind, caring, dedicated person who enjoyed all the students. Present and former students all greeted her so warmly when they would meet her. She was somebody who played a pleasant part in their lives. A happy memory from their school days.

In today's world there is no such thing as loyalty or consistency—the bottom line to everything is cost. That takes precedent over efficiency, dedication and warm compassion to the people they serve. The high school cafeteria was a happy warm environment for the students, thanks to the women who worked there. What message does this give the kids? They see these kind caring women treated like dirt.

What does it tell them? Why be dedicated and hard working? Why be kind and caring? You are only a number that can be tossed away if they can find somebody to do the job cheaper.

I say to Principal Ron Maruya, "Shame on you". We may expect something like this from a large corporate whose bottom line is profit, but not from an educator hired to teach our children and hopefully instill some values in them.

Georgetown

Drivers are putting road crews at risk

Dear editor,

There are certain types of safety standards used for school zones. The standards are also there for the emergency staff, but what about the poor construction crews that work 12-hour shifts to maintain our roads and highways.

I am presently one of these people who is constantly looking behind my back and for the crew I work with.

Why you ask? Well, I am a flag person who works for a company that works maintaining our roads for the regions of Halton and Peel. The idiots who choose to ignore our construction signs mounted on the side of the road warning them that we are there, not only ignore them, but I have to encounter verbal abuse day by day from irate drivers always in a hurry.

Let it be said this concerns me as I am taking my life in my hand every day. I would like to let people know we are just doing our jobs, like themselves, so slow down and have some respect. One day that may be their son or daughter out there risking their lives.

Pay attention to the road signs, and how about lawmakers making stiffer fines for those who do not abide by the speed limit in these zones?

Cat bylaw needed, says reader

Dear editor,

In response to the recent letter, Leave cats alone, I must say that this is a typical response by someone who has never worked in the animal field.

The cat bylaw is an issue in every city. I've worked as an animal control officer for a few years and I would love for people who oppose the cat bylaw to ride around with me for a few days and help pick up hit-by-car cats who are severely injured or scrape the deceased ones off the road. It happens more than you think!

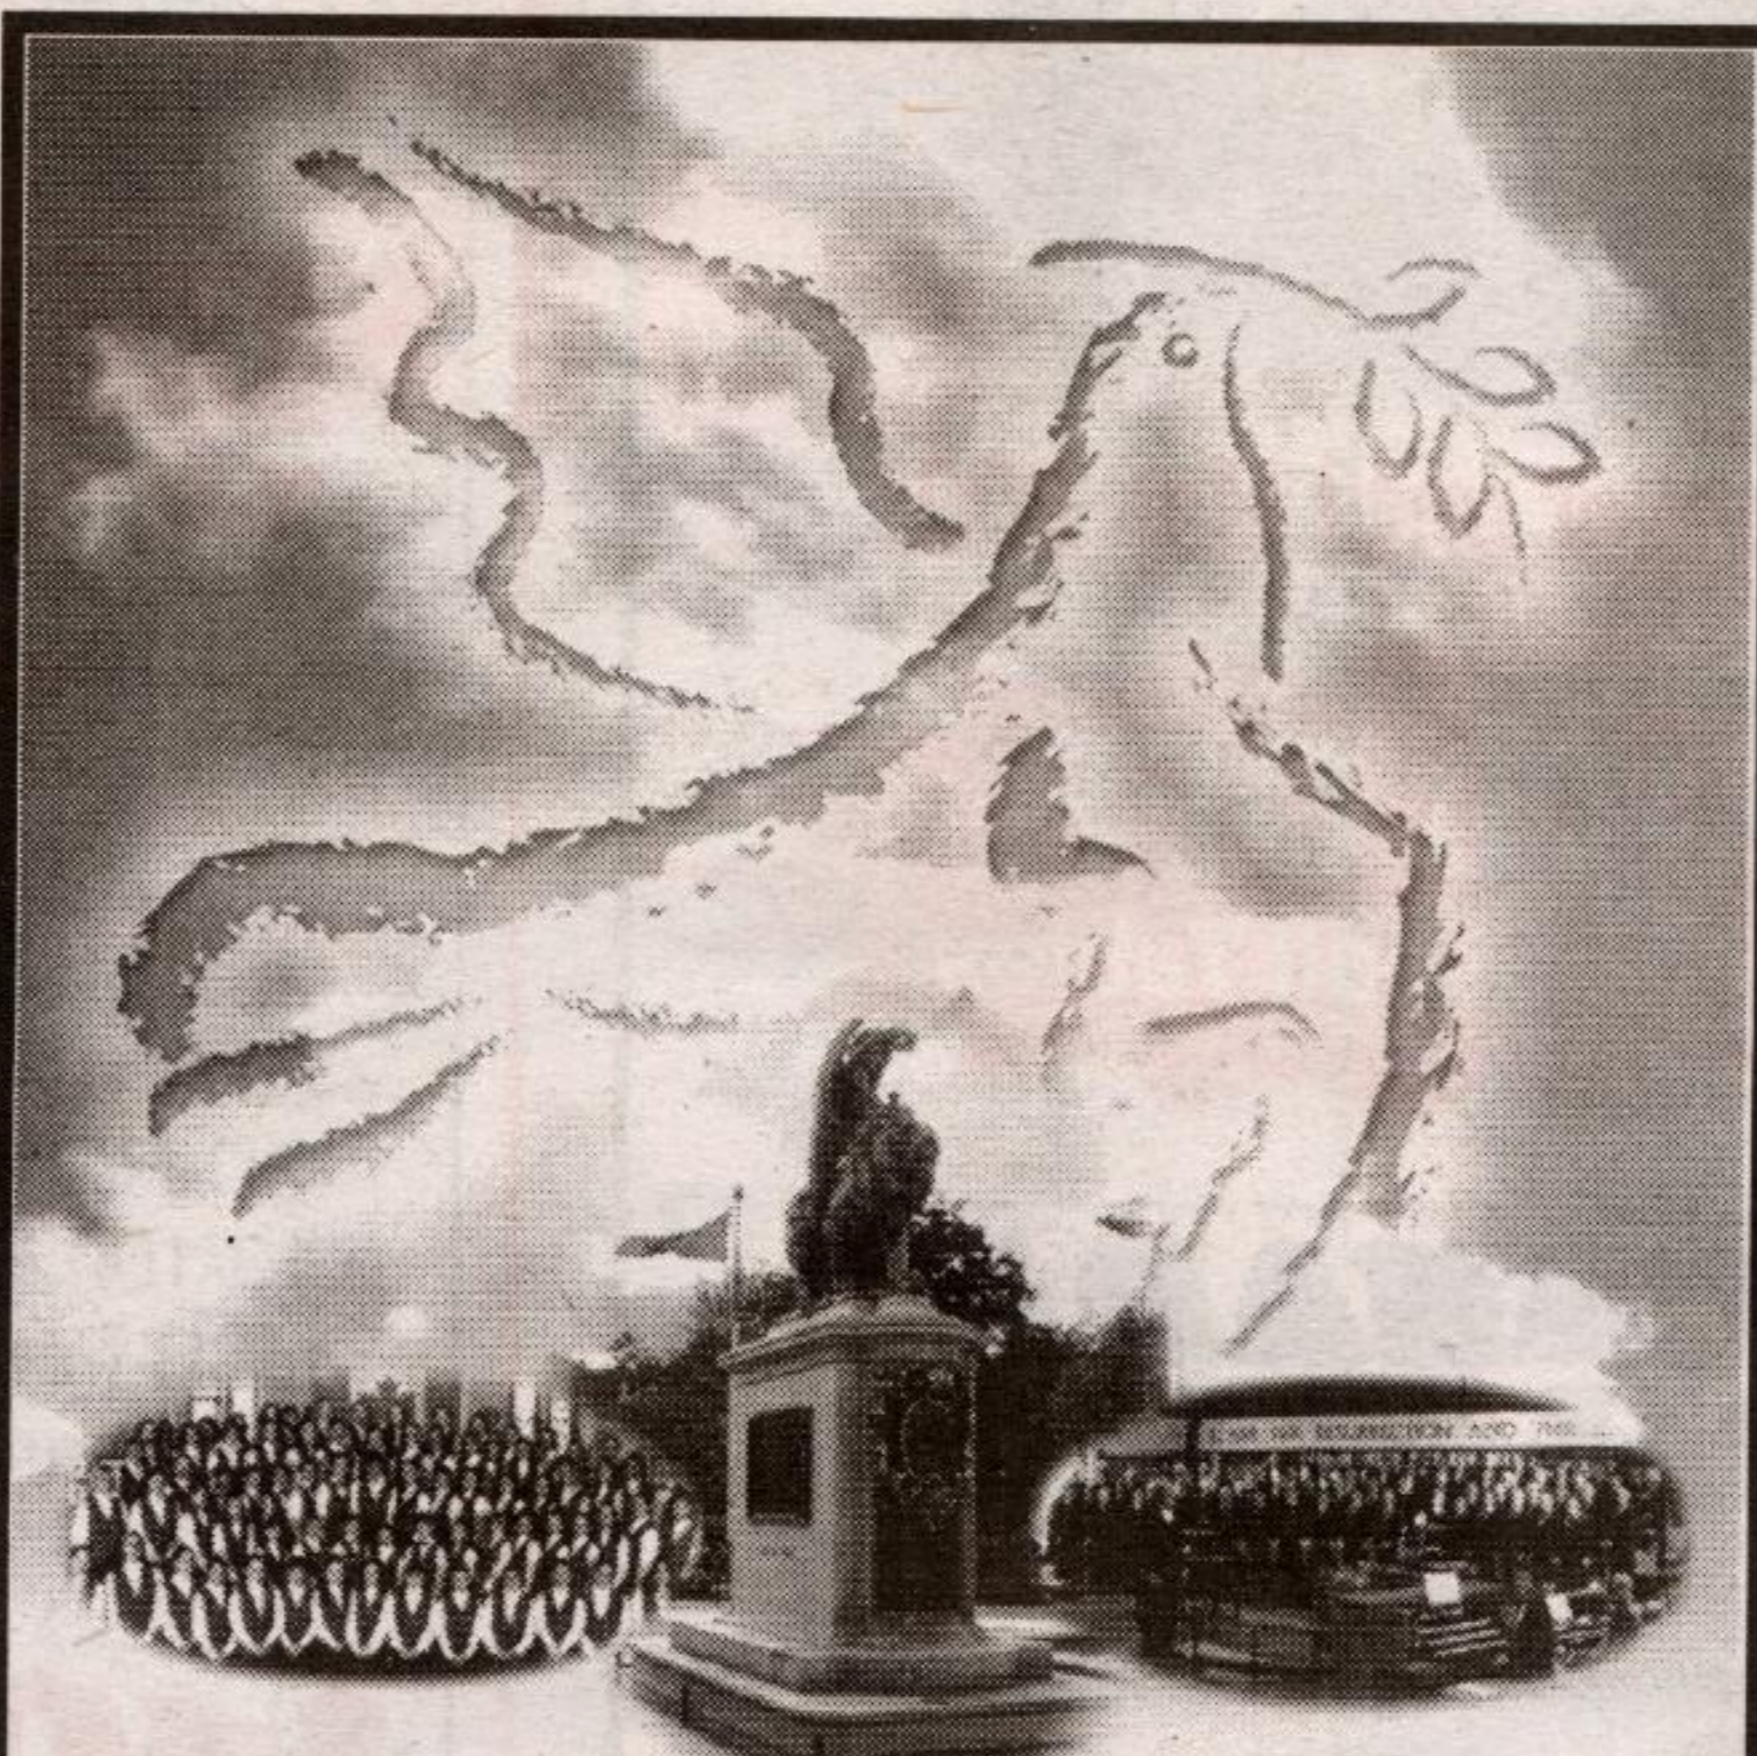

If people would spay and neuter their cats it may not be as big of an issue. As the town grows, so does the cat and dog population. Unspayed cats get pregnant, have a litter and the chain reaction starts. That reaction can total up to 7,000 cats in two years (her litter has litters and their litter of six has a litter...etc.). Yes, this is a problem!

I also don't appreciate people's cats using my garden as a litter box and hunting the birds at MY bird feeder! These cats have been domesticated to be your pet, not a wild animal. Would you like people letting their dogs run around the neighbourhood following their natural instincts? Probably not. But it seems some cat owners feel that, because cats are smaller, it is a different issue. But, from all the complaints that come in from neighbours about cats, it tells me it is the same type of issue.

There has to be something done to control this before it gets out of control.

Please, for the best interest of your cats and dogs, keep them indoors, or confined to your yard before they get injured, pick up a disease or virus from other stray animals or end up dead.

Jodie Beaudry,
Georgetown
