pottery studio at The Williams Mill. "I owe a lot to the CVA. I can't speak highly enough about the warmth and support I have received there," she says. Filter now teaches beginner pottery at the cottage.

The group meets on the second Thursday of each month for 'show and tell', where they can bring current projects and get encouragement and share practical help. They also hold Raku workshops and organize field trips. New members of all skill levels are always welcome.

Altogether, the CVA has 60 members. They show and sell their work at semi-annual group exhibitions held at the Gallery of the Halton Hills Cultural Centre and at the semi-annual CVA sales. The spring show and sale is the first weekend in May and the fall show and sale is the last weekend in November.
