Globe brings Hollywood to Georgetown

Absolutely everyone loves a good detective story and that is what you will get with Georgetown Globe Production's next show, City of Angels.

Filled with humor, satire and terrific music, City of Angels tells the story of a 1940s novelist who turns his private-eye story into a Hollywood screen play. Stine, the novelist, (performed by Pat McManus) has his hands full dealing with the overbearing movie producer (played by Doug Feggans). Meanwhile, Stine's wife Gabby (portrayed by Sonia Kats) disapproves of his loss of principles as he succumbs to the sleazy Hollywood world.

Actually, the audience is treated to two stories in one as Stine uses people from his own life to help develop the fictional characters of his play. Therefore, many of the characters perform dual roles as they depict either the novelist's reality, portrayed in colour, or his black and white movie.

In Stine's movie, the private-eye hero Stone (performed by Mark Llewellyn) works along with his heart-of-gold secretary Oolie (portrayed by Cheyenne Harvey). Stone is hired by the beautiful and mysterious Alaura Kingsley (played by Debbie McFarland) and he soon finds himself caught in her web of greed, deceit and murder. As Stine's detective story unfolds, with the help of his wife and alter-ego Stone, he eventually comes to terms with his own conscience and the result is a Hollywood happy ending.

City of Angels is filled with a number of other lively and colourful characters, portrayed by some of Globe's best performers. In addition, a harmonious jazz quintet assists in telling the story.

As added twist to the plot, look for cameos by some of Halton Hills' local personalities. The audience can play detective too by spotting the celebrities.

City of Angels, the 1990 Tony Award Best Musical, is packed with fast paced adult comedy, smart one-liners and a fantastically energetic jazz score.

City of Angels comes to life in Georgetown through the talented skills of Craig Marshall (director), Kelly Baker (music director), Diane Spence (choreographer) and the combined efforts and enthusiasm of numerous Globe members.

City of Angels will be staged at the John Elliott Theatre in Georgetown from November 18 to 27. Contact the Box Office at 905-877-3700 to purchase tickets.

Arts Week planning begins next week

The plans for next year's Arts Week are under way. Halton Hills Arts Week is a 10-day festival in late April that celebrates the performing and visual arts communities in our town.

Organizers are meeting on Nov. 25 to put together next year's program.

All artists and supporters of the arts are invited to join the Arts Week committee for a planning and information session.

If you would like more information or details on the meeting, contact Carol-Ann Michaelson, 702-1330 or e-mail camichaelson@cogeco.ca.
