Acton artisan's 'passion' gets published

Fine furniture designer/craftsman and teacher Hendrik Varju of Acton has been published in the American magazine, Fine Woodworking, one of the most respected woodworking magazines in North America

Being published in Fine Woodworking is considered a triumph by any professional woodworker, Varju said. In the August 2005 issue, No. 178, Varju was hired to be their representative expert in answering a question from a reader. In answering, Varju shares his technique for improving the figure of quartersawn oak, a species known for its use in Mission-style furniture. He developed a method to expose the stunning ray fleck pattern hidden within any piece of quartersawn red or white oak, as well as other quartersawn species. Varju's piece will help the readership learn more about how to best display the beauty of wood in designs.

Varju is also a contributing editor to Canadian Home Workshop and Canadian Woodworking. For more information about Varju go to www.passionforwood.com.

Artists Among Us

About 40 artists from the surrounding area are participating in the latest exhibit at the Halton Hills Cultural Centre, which continues until Oct. 31. Georgetown artisans included top left, Naomi Assenheim, top right, Inge Kremer and bottom, Eileen Simpson.
