Mold-Masters aids Red Cross relief

Boys create comic to raise funds for Cancer Society

Alex Struwing and Liam Henderson, both George Kennedy Public School students, created a character called Ratman and wrote comics about his adventures. These were sold during the Downtown Georgetown Farmers Market and the youngsters donated all the money they earned to cancer research.

Shauna Henderson, also of George Kennedy School, along with Nicole and Tayler Keipura, created bookmarks and bracelets to support both cancer research and more specifically breast cancer research.

The kids managed to raise $91.25, which they donated to the Brampton/Caledon/Georgetown/Dufferin County Unit of the Canadian Cancer Society, as well as $40 which was donated to the Breast Cancer Research Foundation.
