Georgetown Little Theatre launches new season on Nov. 3

The Georgetown Little Theatre (GLT) kicks off its 45th season on November 3 with the classic comedy, The Importance of Being Earnest, by Oscar Wilde.

Set in Victorian England, the play follows the romantic misadventures of two young bachelors, Jack and Algernon, as they pursue their true loves, Gwendolen and Cecily. Along the way are plots, seductions, reversals, mistaken identities and battles between the sexes, all framed with Wilde's sparkling wit and scathing observations of high society that still make audiences laugh out loud today.

Staged in full Victorian period costumes and sets, Earnest is an ambitious choice for GLT's opener which promises to be well worth the effort.

Experienced director Kathryn DeLory, in her first production with GLT, has taken the reins with gusto and has put together a terrific cast which includes GLT favourites David Brock and Marg Brady as well as talented newcomers Kathy Santha, Julia Lederer and Brian Jedan.

GLT is introducing other exciting changes this year. To give theatre-goers more flexibility and choice, an "open subscription" model has been introduced, allowing subscribers to choose any performance night for either two or three of the season's three shows. And as always, tickets can be exchanged for different nights at the last minute for a nominal fee.

The other shows this season are The Dining Room by AR Gurney, a dramatic comedy about the vanishing traditional family, featuring over 50 characters played by just six actors, and the hilarious Perils of Persephone by Dan Needles, which shows what happens when you mix local small town politics with a bit of nuclear waste.

GLT's Youth Company is still going strong this year with their third major annual production, The Insect Play, which unravels the mysteries of human existence, as seen in the life of (you guessed it), bugs. The Insect Play is a spectacular, thought-provoking fantasy.

For more information on tickets and subscriptions, call the John Elliott Theatre Box Office at 905-877-3700. For more information on the Youth Company, GLT membership or the GLT in general, please call 905-877-3422.
