

Young's to provide free flu shot clinics this month

This year, like last, Neil Young and the staff at Young's Pharmacy & Homecare are providing free flu shots at their Georgetown Main St. location.

Young's pharmacist Randy Carman received his flu shot from RN Maureen Sokolowski.

"Although the flu is mostly a nuisance to most healthy people, if we can reduce the number of flu cases in the general public we can significantly reduce the chances of someone who has fragile health from contracting the flu and those are the people at risk of suffering serious consequences from the flu," said Young.

"We screen for other health risks when we accept people for their flu shot and always advise patients to see their family doctor whenever a significant health issue is encountered. I believe that pharmacies are the most accessible primary healthcare resource available. It only makes sense that we include flu shots in our other disease prevention and health risk assessment activities."

Young said he wants to make the clinic days as pleasant as possible with short waits, lucky draws and refreshments for patients. Other downtown businesses are supporting the clinics with coupons and other inducements for patients, many of whom are unfamiliar with downtown Georgetown.

"The clinics are a win-win for everyone," he said. "The public's health is served and Downtown Georgetown gets to see a lot of new faces."

The clinics are: tomorrow (Thursday), Wednesday Nov. 9, Tuesday Nov. 15 and Tuesday Nov. 22, 9:30 a.m. and 8 p.m. A member of the nursing staff is in the store weekdays and can usually accommodate most walk-in requests for flu shots outside the clinic days. However, one is advised to call ahead to confirm a walk-in flu shot. Young's nursing team can also provide flu shots onsite for local employers.
