HONDA ACCORD HYBRID

Fuel consumption: City: 9.5 L/100 km Hwy: 6.4 L/100 km

Powerful. Incredibly efficient.
A contradiction in terms? Not with the 2006 Accord Hybrid. It's a hybrid in the truest sense, combining a powerful gasoline engine with the added boost of an integrated electric motor. The Integrated Motor Assist (IMA) system, combined with Honda's advanced Variable Cylinder Management (VCM) technology gives the 3.0-litre, 253 hp V6 gas engine super fuel efficiency and serious power.

HONDA CIVIC HYBRID

Fuel consumption: City: 7.8 L/100 km Hwy: 5.7 L/100 km

One look and you can tell this is a new breed of Civic. With the Civic Hybrid, you get an amazing, reliable car that is also the most affordable hybrid in Canada. The Hybrid's Integrated Motor Assist (IMA) system pairs a super-efficient 1.3-litre gasoline engine with a lightweight, high-output electric motor that delivers an estimated highway fuel consumption of only 4.3 L/100 km. How is this possible? At steady speeds below 60 km/h, on level roads and under light throttle, fuel injection can cease and the car can be propelled solely by the IMA system's electric motor. At higher cruising speeds, the gasoline engine provides the power. A marvel of low-friction engineering, it provides plenty of horsepower while still sipping fuel and having a near-zero effect on air quality.
