Acton artist displays art at Main Street Inn

The Main Street Inn of Georgetown features artwork by Sandra Hancock for the month of September.

Though Hancock's formal education is in graphic design and illustration, she left the field to pursue painting at home while raising her two children. Her girls provided the initial inspiration for her "mermaid series". These paintings unveil an imaginative, carefree world rendered in acrylic, copper and beads. (The mermaid above is entitled "Syreenah".)

This led to her latest works—a number of 3-D mixed media collages. These paintings include everyday objects from daily lives "cast off" to become "found treasures" rescued from junk drawers to thrift stores.

Hancock's work was shown this summer at the Glen's Williams Mill and the juried show, at the Wellington County Museum. Past exhibitions include Milton Arts Festival, Halton Hills Cultural Centre with painter Wynne Paquette, and Guelph Arts Festival. She also produces limited edition giclée prints, greeting cards and does various portrait commissions.

The works currently showing at the Main Street Inn, 126 Main St., South, range in price from $90 to $900.

For more information about Hancock's work, contact her at 519-853-3305.

Holcro wants directors

Holcro Non-Profit housing provider is seeking expressions of interest from residents of Halton Hills who are willing to serve on the board of directors for Cote Terrace, 171 Main St. S., Georgetown.

Meetings are held 10-12 times per year, usually monthly, to allow consideration of a prepared agenda. The time commitment including preparation for meetings is about three to four hours monthly.

The Holcro board is seeking individuals who have skills or experience that will contribute to their being able to meet their fiduciary, legal and community responsibilities.

Please send a letter, which includes a description of the attributes that you will bring to the board to the attention of the President. Fax your letter to 905-578-0293 or mail to Holcro Non-Profit Housing Corporation, 171 Main St. S., Georgetown, L7G 3E7. Applications will be interviewed by board representatives.
