Is your vehicle ready for winter?

No matter where you live in Canada, you are bound to deal with winter. In many cases, that means cold and snow and ice. You may have purchased all the necessary clothes and prepared your house for the cold season, but is your vehicle ready?

If your vehicle is a little older, now is the best time to have it inspected by your favorite mechanic. Among the most important components to be inspected are the battery and fluids. If your battery has shown some signs of weakness during summer have it inspected and, if advised by the mechanic, have it changed. Don't hesitate or you are bound to stall one cold morning, and will have to change it then.

For most Canadian drivers, winter tires are an intelligent solution to dangerous winter driving. Many drivers do not hesitate to buy four new winter tires, not only for the better traction, but also for safety. Some motorists know a lot about tires and have already made their choices for the upcoming winter. But with so many brands and models out there, it can be confusing for many other motorists, one thing is certain, you must make sure the winter tire you buy is perfectly suited to your vehicle.

In the winter, keeping a windshield clean is not always easy. Therefore, there are a few factors that should be considered. First, buy a new set of wipers if yours are worn. Second, make sure to repair all chips or cracks because once the freezing temperatures come, those cracks will spread and get worse.

Whether or not you like tools or are handy, you will need some important accessories to tackle winter driving. It may not be very snowy where you live, but cold is a factor that can get you into trouble. Installing a remote starter will give your car sufficient time to warm up saving your engine from wear.

Finally, winter can cause car bodies and components to rust. In such cases, there are businesses that offer rustproofing, mostly done with special oils that will protect the car in all its hidden corners. Yes, oil can be your best ally against winter damages and will protect your investment for years to come.
