

Lamborghini has commissioned Lamborghini ArtiMarca, its official merchandise boutique, to create baubles, candles and cards to provide a luxurious accompaniment to Christmas festivities in true Italian style.

Have a very merry Lamborghini Christmas

Add the Italian spirit of Lamborghini to your Christmas celebrations this year with a range of limited edition Christmas candles, baubles and even Christmas cards.

To complete the Christmas tableaux, Lamborghini's ArtiMarca range provides gifts for all: model cars, pencils and pads, mouse mats and tee shirts make ideal stocking fillers for children, whilst Automobili Lamborghini cufflinks, exclusive ladies' wallets and card holders in Lamborghini yellow, and luxurious cashmere scarves for men and women are just a few of the gift ideas for discerning grown-ups at Christmas!

Lamborghini ArtiMarca, Lamborghini's official merchandise boutique, has designed the baubles, candles and cards to provide a luxurious accompaniment to Christmas festivities in Italian style.

Two sizes of slow-burning candles in a soft grey, Grigio Teleso, echoes one of the official colours of Lamborghini's V12 Murcielago LP640 launched earlier this year.

"Buon Natale" and the Lamborghini shield are imprinted into the wax and finished in gold spray.

The baubles, in lightweight ceramic, are crafted in the same colour. Offered as a boxed set of three for the tree or as a giant, "keepsake" bauble that could be used as a Christmas ornament or table decoration, all are decorated with the official Lamborghini shield in black and gold.

The Christmas cards are available in presentation boxes of 20, complete with special white ink pens for writing onto the coated black cards, and transparent yellow envelopes.

Complete with multi-language "Seasons Greetings" in English, Italian, German, French, Spanish, Japanese and Chinese, the Christmas cards reflect the international spirit of Lamborghini and the worldwide goodwill of Christmas.

GM's Corvette engine earns prestigious award

General Motor's small-block V8 added another accolade to a long list of honours when Corvette Racing's LS7.R was named the Global Motorsport Engine of the Year at the inaugural Professional Motorsport World Expo in Germany.

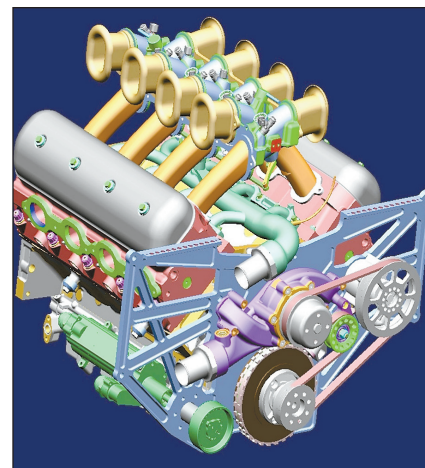

The race-prepared LS7.R engine, which shares its architecture with the production LS7 small-block V8, propelled Corvette Racing to its fifth GT1 class victory in the 24 Hours of Le Mans on June 18, 2006.

The 7.0-litre engine also powered the Compuware Corvette C6.R racecars to the 2006 American Le Mans Series manufacturers', drivers' and teams' championships with a perfect reliability record.

The 2006 Race Engine of the Year Awards was organized by Race Engine Technology magazine.

The Global Motorsport Engine of the Year award was given to GM engineer Roger Allen, engine manager for Corvette Racing. Herb Fishel, former director of GM Racing, accepted the award on behalf of Allen and GM Racing at the ceremony. The Corvette Racing program was conceived in 1996 under Fishel's guidance.

The LS7 bristles with race-inspired technology from Corvette Racing, including titanium connecting rods and inlet valves, a dry-sump lubrication system, CNC-ported cylinder heads, a forged steel crankshaft, and a big-bore aluminum block with plate-honed cylinders.
