

Pub releases CD of favourite Friday night entertainers

"The CD was the idea of one of our regulars' Richard Boersma, who enjoys Friday night here," said Ruggle. "He persuaded the individual performers to allow us to put their music on this CD, and to sell them to aid Amnesty."

In addition to Boersma's initiative to attain permission from the performers, a former regular, Russ Dutnell (who now makes his home in Oklahoma,) donated his artwork to the cause, with sketches of The Crook inside and outside the CD jewel case.

"They even recorded some sounds from the pub itself," said Ruggle, "To give it atmosphere. The actual musical recordings are from the artists' own CDs."

Six months in the making, regular performer Eugene Rea did the studio work to put the project together and the CDs are now available over the counter at the popular Main St. pub.

Shepherd's Crook owner Rick Ruggle shows off the CD, with recordings of favourite Friday night entertainers.

For all those regulars who enjoy Friday evening musical entertainment at the Shepherd's Crook on Main St in Georgetown, owner Rick Ruggle has a unique offer available to patrons.

A CD, entitled Friday Nights at The Shepherd's Crook is now available at the pub, featuring recordings of many of the regular performers who play there Friday nights.

In addition to purchasing a copy of the Celtic style music, the local chapter of Amnesty International also benefits, with $5 from the sale of every $20 CD going to Amnesty.

The CD features regulars Bob MacLean, Failte, John Eccleston, Nonie Crete and Eugene Rae, Tom Leighton and Conrad Kipping, and Georgetown's own Classic Folk.
