Council endorses call on Province for more funding for long-term care

Halton Hills council has endorsed a Simcoe County council resolution calling on the provincial government to keep its promise to increase the amount of funding per senior in the long-term care homes.

In 2003, the Liberal government had promised to increase funding by $6,000 per resident per year, but since then, only one third of that money, $2,300, has been added.

Wards 3 & 4 Regional Councillor Jane Fogal, a former Bennett Health Care Centre board member, said, "I saw through my experiences there that there is a need to increase the funding for the care portion."

What is really needed is funding for a better level of care, she said, particularly for food.

"My belief is once you get to a long-term facility about one of the only things you have to look forward to is the food, and if there is not enough money for that, then that's a pretty poor quality of life," she said.
