Free lecture on cancer prevention

BARBARA HALSALL
 Special to The IFP

LIZ ARMSTRONG

All invited to hear Liz Armstrong co-author of Cancer: 101 Solutions to a Preventable Epidemic on Tuesday, January 22 at St. John's United Church, 11 Guelph St., Georgetown.

Meet the speaker over coffee at 7:30 p.m. Presentation at 8 p.m.

What is often lost in the desperate search for the cancer 'cure' is the extensive body of scientific research that addresses cancer prevention.

In their new book, Cancer: 101 Solutions to a Preventable Epidemic (New Society, 2007) Liz Armstrong, Guy Dauncey and Anne Wordsworth examine the complex relationship between the air we breathe, the food we eat, the water we drink, the products we use, and the health and well being of our bodies, and of our planet.

The book outlines what too many of us already know first-hand: that cancer has reached epidemic proportions. In 2007 nearly half of all North American men and close to 40 per cent of women will be diagnosed with a malignant cancer at some point in their lives. StatsCan reports that cancer is now—or soon will be—the number one cause of death in Canada.

Hear concrete solutions that we can each undertake—to put us on the path toward cancer prevention.

Cancer: 101 Solutions to a Preventable

Epidemic systematically assesses the vast body of scientific literature that tracks the presence of carcinogens in our water, air, homes and workplaces, and concludes that many cancers are largely preventable.

The authors adopt the now well-established 'precautionary principle' espoused by numerous medical and scientific professional bodies. It puts the onus on industries to demonstrate that their substances are safe and not toxic to humans, wildlife or the planet. The authors waded through hundreds of important studies and came up with 101 step-by-step solutions that can guide each of us—through individual, governmental and community action—toward a healthier life, lessening our toxic burden, and reducing the risks for cancer.
