

Watt's up at Mountsberg?

Darren Hester (left) and Diana Mijailovic were among the group of Grade 5 students from George Kennedy Public School in Georgetown who enjoyed a field trip to Mountsberg Conservation Area recently to take part in the launch of the conservation area's new energy conservation and education program, Watts the Difference which illustrates various energy conservation methods. The kids learned about the amount of wood it takes to bring a pot of water to boil on an open fire, versus a wood stove. (Right) Mitchell Davie (left) and Mayson Redmond steadied the log for Cole Cameron to cut some firewood during one of the energy demonstrations. Mountsberg also unveiled their new wind generator and solar panels as part of the program.
