

Helping hands

Reconstruction work at the Devereaux House is underway, and two local businesses have been the first to step forward and donate $2,000 each to the project in materials. On hand to make the donation of materials were (from left) Jon Hurst, Dave Frost and Mary Fendley of Gerrie Electric, Georgetown Soccer Association secretary Bert Zonneveld, Devereaux House lead hand Marty Hughes and Marty Glaude of Howell Pipe and Supply. Work is progressing well, but Friends of Devereaux House report they could use more volunteers, especially trades people experienced in woodworking or plastering.

The Town of Halton Hills is in search mode for a new Town Clerk after Caledon lured Karen Landry to take over its top clerk position there.

Landry, the Town Clerk here for the past seven years, took over the Caledon post, vacated by retiring Cheri Cowan, on March 31.

In the meantime, Deputy Clerk and Manager of Standards and Licensing Debbie Edmonds steps up as Acting Deputy Clerk while Leesa Emmerson, the Council and Committee Services co-ordinator, has assumed the role of Acting Deputy Clerk.

At her final council meeting in March, Landry thanked Halton Hills council and Town staff, saying, "I've immensely enjoyed working for the Town of Halton Hills over the years."

Meanwhile changes are also occurring in another Town department. Council has decided on the permanent merger of the Building Services department with the Engineering and Public Works Department. The new department will be called the Infrastructure Services Department.

Chris Mills, the current director of the two departments, will continue in that role as Director of Infrastructure Services and Town Engineer. The integration will focus on customer services and service delivery, stated a Town press release.
