Cathy Longhurst

Many people are surprised when they find out how emotional Cathy Longhurst's profession is. As the owner and operator of Art Effects Gallery and Framing Centre, Cathy and her dedicated staff are professional picture framers.

But when you think about it, if you care enough to have something framed, the picture or object is obviously quite important to you.

"Picture framing is a luxury thing," says Cathy. "People bring things in to be framed because it means something to them."

Located on Guelph Street near Delrex Boulevard, Art Effects has been framing memories for 21 years. Cathy has worked at the business for 15 years and became the owner nearly two years ago.

Art Effects doesn't just frame photos and paintings. Cathy has framed some unusual objects over the years, including snake's skin, butterflies, even a man's hip joint. And that's why Cathy loves her job.

"I love the people," she says. "I love the emotional, personal stories that bring people here to frame what they love."

Susan Hamilton

Susan Hamilton of Corks Winery turned a hobby into a career. She made wine at her home for years until she realized that there was no place in Halton Hills where people can brew their own wine. Corks Winery grew out of her love for homemade wine.

In its seven years in business, Corks Winery has become the place to go if you love wine. The winery offers brew-on-premises services as well as wine kits that customers can buy and bring home to make.

The brew-on-premises process takes two visits. During the first visit, customers pick the wine they want to make and add the yeast. Four to five weeks later, they return to the winery and bottle their wine.

"We tell the customer that those are the longest five weeks they'll ever have to wait," Susan says with a laugh.

Susan enjoys getting to know her customers in the winery's friendly, relaxed atmosphere.

"The customers are the best part," she says. "We really enjoy getting to know our customers, and helping with their selection of wines."

Dianne Gamble

Hi, my name is Dianne Gamble.

I have been part of the Home Health Care system since 1985 attending to the personal needs of women who have had breast surgery and require a breast prosthesis. I carry a large selection of mastectomy supplies.

I am also certified to fit medical compression stockings for tired fatigued legs, swelling and varicose veins. Most of the devices are covered by private insurance companies.

My facility is tastefully decorated for complete comfort and privacy. I work closely with the Canadian Cancer Society and area doctors.

Allow me to be of service to you when you call to arrange a private appointment.

Angie Cormpilas, Broker

Angie Cormpilas's personal mission in life is to make at least a couple of people a little happier each day. Given all the awards she has won for her work as a real estate broker at Re/Max Performance Realty Inc., she certainly seems to be accomplishing her goal. Since 1996, she has been named Re/Max's No. 1 salesperson in Georgetown. Last year, Re/Max also named her their No. 1 salesperson in Canada and their No. 1 residential salesperson in the world.

Angie, who has 20 years of experience in the business, uses all of her past experiences and her extensive knowledge of real estate to help each and every client. This dedication to her clients and her hard-working nature are the keys to her continued success.

"The promise and commitment I make to my clients is what gets me out of bed in the morning," she says. "The best part about my job is the gratification that comes with knowing I did the very best any professional or personal coach could possibly have offered a paying customer."

Dr. Stephanie Ewing

October 9, 2001 is a date that Dr. Stephanie Ewing will never forget. It was on this day she opened the Mountainview Animal Hospital in Georgetown South, a veterinary hospital that offers preventative health care, and surgical and medical diagnostic and treatment to local animals. A veterinarian with 14 years of experience, Dr. Ewing dedicates herself to the care and treatment of companion animals- pets like dogs, cats, rabbits and rodents.

"I love animals and I love working with the clients," she says. "Veterinarians get a sense of satisfaction in helping an animal get better and seeing the happiness it brings the family."

In all her years as a vet, Dr. Ewing has seen many changes in the field. Diseases and animal health problems that couldn't be fixed when she first graduated from vet school can now be treated thanks to advances in science and technology. And that's great news for all veterinarians, who love helping animals get better.

"I think this is the most rewarding career," she says. "There's nothing else in this world I could see myself doing."
