Mystery revealed! How to find that elusive book

In some of my columns I have given you examples of good books to read. This time I have something a little different for you— I am going to tell you how to find great books for yourself.

If you have been to the library before, you may have asked a question like “My friend told me about this fabulous mystery series which involves two cats living in an apple barn. Do you know which books I mean?” And with a flutter of fingers over a keyboard, we library staff magically say, “Yes, of course, right this way,” and the books in question are found.

Well, magicians may never reveal their secrets, but library folk are happy to share. One of our best tricks is Novelist. Novelist is an online database of books: fiction, non-fiction, children's, teens' and adults'. The wonderful thing about Novelist is that it includes an enormous amount of full text: reviews, summaries, subjects, first chapters, essays, book-club guides and more. What does that mean to you? Well, it means you can search seemingly ridiculous descriptions of books (mystery cats apple barn) and find the answer in a flash (Lillian Jackson Braun's The Cat Who Mysteries). Pretty cool, don't you think?

Here's how to do it: Go to the library's website at www.library.hhpl.on.ca, from the menu down the middle of the page, click on “Book Lovers”, and then click on the lavender “Novelist” link. Now here's the magical secret.

Clare Hanman

Just under the Novelist logo, there are two links written in white: “Home” and “Advanced Search”. Select “Advanced Search”. Type your three-or-four-word book description into the box beside “Find”, select “TX All Text” in the next box and click on “Search”. Abracadabra! And you don't have to just use a description to search. Say you are really in the mood for a humorous novel about a sad subject, searching “happy sad” will bring up all sorts of great reading suggestions.

So, next time you are looking for a particular book or you need ideas about what to read next, why not give Novelist a try? But don't forget that Novelist is not the only trick we library folk have up our sleeves. We are always happy to help you find reading suggestions. Gives us a call, or stop in at your local branch, and we will work a little readers' advice magic especially for you.
