

Men needed to become Big Brothers

If the last lazy week of summer has you wondering about what lies ahead in the fall, why not mentor a child and change a life?
 Big Brothers Big Sisters of Halton is encouraging men to step up to the plate and volunteer to be a mentor to a boy on the waiting list.

While many area kids will be looking forward to days of riding bikes, playing baseball, or enjoying an ice cream, for many youngsters waiting for a Big Brother these activities are beyond their reach.
 While the agency's campaign to find 100 Good Men in 2008 has attracted some new volunteers, there continues to be a severe shortage of male mentors in the Halton Hills.
 "Being a Big Brother doesn't have to be an expensive or time-consuming proposition," said Big Brothers Big Sisters of Halton Coordinator of Volunteers Wendy Somerville. "Basketball in the park, scavenger hunts, fishing, building a bird house are all inexpensive activities that can result in amazing memories for a child who doesn't have a positive male role model in their life."

 If you're interested in finding out how a little bit of time can mean a lot to a child, please call the Big Brothers Big Sisters of Halton North Halton office, 905-878-8840, e-mail info@bbshalton.ca, or visit www.bbshalton.ca
