Bentley has 'no regrets' despite lopsided defeat

"I got a lot of support," said the retired GDHS teacher. "A lot of people volunteered and worked (on the campaign). I have no regrets."

One of the biggest challenges she faced in the campaign she said was, "it's a big riding and I was not really known."

She called her experience as a candidate "positive," and at this point doesn't know if she will run again.

Green Party candidate Lavictoire was "excited and happy" with his results and his party's showing across the province.

"Ten per cent (of popular vote) was my goal and I also wanted to be a top 10 riding in Ontario," said Lavictoire.

He believes climate change is causing more Ontarians to vote Green.

"There was a lot of protest votes out there," said NDP candidate

Duignan, who had hoped for better results.

"Their (the Green Party) economic policies are very libertarian and a lot of the protest went to that party," said Duignan.

Family Coalition Party leader Gori said he, "didn't expect to win or get to 15 per cent (of the vote)" but was also hoping to garner more support.

"Depending on the mood I could have had anywhere between 1 to 10 per cent," said Gori.

Voter turnout in Wellington-Halton Hills was slightly higher than the provincial average at 58.1 per cent, while Ontario-wide, turnout was 52.7 per cent.

Panel member 'not surprised' at MMP's failure

In line with the trend across Ontario, Wellington-Halton Hills voters overwhelmingly rejected a move to a new electoral system Wednesday.

Unofficial results in Halton Hills showed 66 per cent of voters supported the existing first-past-the-post system, while only 34 per cent voted in favour of the Mixed Member Proportional (MMP) system proposed by the Citizen's Assembly on Electoral Reform.

Ontario-wide, there was a little more support for MMP, with nearly 37 per cent of voters favouring that option, compared to 63 per cent who put their votes behind first-past-the-post.

Georgetown resident John Daley, a member of the Citizen's Assembly on Electoral Reform, was disappointed with the outcome of the referendum, "from the standpoint of lack of information fed to the general public through Elections Ontario."

"They didn't have information to assimilate what it was they were voting for," said Daley, who added Elections Ontario should have launched its pre-vote education program on the referendum much sooner.

"The real reason there was little support for MMP is simply lack of understanding and that can be blamed on ineffective, often obscure, or better yet, useless marketing to get the message out about MMP," said Daley.

He added, however, we wasn't surprised the proposed system didn't pass because "of the very high yardstick—that 60 per cent (support required)."

"We questioned that right from the very beginning," he said.

For the new system to pass it needed approval by 60 per cent of those casting ballots and majority approval in at least 64 ridings—MMP only achieved that level in five ridings.

A GOOD REASON TO SHOP LOCAL

When asked to name our favorite restaurant, cafe, or shop, we almost always cite a unique local business (look at the results in our Readers' Choice as proof). We embrace the idea of distinctive businesses with local character, but often forget their survival depends on our patronage. It is easy for us to get so consumed by efficiency that we forget how much of our lives we spend eating out, shopping, and doing other business. We owe it to ourselves to consider the quality of our experience, and ask if we benefit when we choose a community-based business. Local owners with much of their life savings invested in their businesses have a natural interest in the long-term health of the community. Community-based businesses are essential to charitable endeavors, frequently serving on local boards, and supporting a variety of causes. Yes, there are some corporate chains that give back to towns in which they do business, but anyone who raises funds for local non-profits will tell you that independents are their base of support. So... support your neighbors... support our community, shop smart... shop our local stores!
