Superior Glove Works honoured

Acton's Superior Glove Works was recently recognized with a major safety industry award for a glove the firm spent years developing.

Superior Glove Works' steel mesh glove—the 'Triple Play'— won the Workplace HR & Safety (formerly Compliance Magazine) Commitment to Worker Safety Award in the category of hand protection. The win was no small feat for Superior considering industry giant Kimberly Clarke was last year's winner.

"The Triple Play glove took years of research and development, and offers the best combination of abrasion, puncture and cut protection of anything on the market. Pardon the pun, but it truly is a cutting-edge design," said Tony Geng, president of Superior Glove Works. "This award is a tremendous honour, and we feel it confirms our position as a leading innovator of exciting new ideas in hand protection."

The award was presented at Superior's booth at the National Safety Congress in Chicago earlier this month (Oct, 15).
