

GDHS art and craft show attracts over 100 vendors

Georgetown's own version of a 'one-of-a-kind' Art & Craft show—a community tradition for 21 years—runs this weekend.

The GDHS Art & Craft Sale is a two-day show, Saturday and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is $4 for adults including a free raffle ticket. Children under 12 years get in free.

The popularity of this event draws vendors from many areas, such as Ancaster, Rockwood, Welland, Toronto, Oakville, Kitchener, Huntsville, Dundas, Carlisle, Cobalt, Orangeville and Baden—so there is always something new to see.

Among the more than 100 vendors will be local watercolourist Susan Little and Karen Pogson, another local talented artisan who sells her hand painted items all over the world. Gail Dell will be selling her popular home décor items. Linda Kreitner will be selling handpainted mailboxes. Paul Vuurman will be selling his unique bird houses. Also, look for many new artisans—Marie Ferri will be selling hand-knit sweaters, Christmas stockings and costume dolls. Victoria Kovaleva will be selling her unique ceramic art items. Gordon Smallwood, a GDHS alumnus, is returning from Napanee to sell his nature photo art.

So whether you are looking for chocolates or shortbreads, jewellery, woodcrafts or stained glass, this sale has something for everyone's tastes!

The weekend event will also include 50/50 draw and raffle. Raffle prizes include a muskoka chair, created at GDHS, an oil painting created by one of our returning vendors, a beautiful glass hurricane candle created by Karen Pogson and a gift item donated by Gena Allan ('The Littlest Chef').

The GDHS Foods' class will be baking muffins and preparing salads to feed vendors and visitors. King's Pizza will be supplying pizza and the GDHS Senior Boys' Basketball team will be available to barbecue hot dogs and hamburgers.

The GDHS Art and Craft Show is a major fundraiser for GDHS. Last year funds raised enabled the purchase of such items as data projectors, a laser printer, fitness testing equipment, heart rate monitors, a portable sound system and other equipment needed by the various departments. In addition, 30 per cent of the sale's proceeds were paid out to various teams and clubs at the school to help with their particular expenses.
