Fall Home Care & Renovations

Relieve stress by creating a bedroom hideaway

Our world moves at such a frenetic pace that the whirlwind is often brought home with us after a long day's work. This is why it's so important to get a full night's rest in a comfortable space. Here is one significant way to help create a bedroom hideaway that's conducive to quality sleep.

Analyze your sleeping space for sound quality

Can you hear your children playing video games downstairs? Or hear the muffling of your dishwasher or heater in the levels below? These noises often cause distraction and make it difficult to fall asleep.

Sound is energy that travels through the air and eventually moves through barriers such as your home's walls and floors. An effective sound control system will break the vibration and absorb the sound.

To create a bedroom that isolates sounds and controls noise transmission, renovate your bedroom by installing QuietZone Acoustic Batt Insulation from Owens Corning. Applied in your room's interior walls and floors, as well as ceilings for rooms located on lower levels, it can help absorb household noise and increase acoustical privacy.

When renovating your bedroom, also consider the following to help maximize comfort:

- . Is your room as dark as possible when you sleep?
- . Does the light shine through your blinds in the early morning?
- . Do your pillows and blankets need replacing?
- . Is there clutter around the room that distracts you?

Installing QuietZone Acoustical Batt Insulation to create quiet rooms in your home requires some work but delivers a large payoff. After all, who can put a price on peace and quiet, and a good night's sleep?
