It embraces the essence of joy, the spirit of giving and the season of hope by contributing to Halton Hills' reputation as a friendly, family-oriented community.

With this exciting new initiative in place, the Christmas Tree Lighting event usually held in the Georgetown Hospital courtyard will not take place this year.

Clean hands protect lives

Hand cleaning is one of the best ways you and your health care team can prevent infections from spreading.

HHS is actively participating in the Clean Hands Protect Lives Campaign, recently launched by the Ontario Hospital Association (OHA) and the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care (MOHLTC). The campaign outlines the key times when healthcare providers should clean their hands and wear gloves and how patients and visitors can do their part to stop the spread of infections.

Healthcare Providers

Your healthcare team is committed to giving you clean, safe care. There are important moments when your healthcare team should clean their hands, such as:

- After touching objects in a patient's room and going to another room
- Before and after treating patients
- Before and after special procedures
- After contact with body fluids, such as blood and urine.

Patients and Visitors

When you come to the hospital, hand cleaning is your job too. Whether you are a patient or a visitor, do your part to prevent germs from spreading. Make sure you clean your hands often and especially:

- Before and after eating
- After using the washroom
- After sneezing or coughing

Visitors who do not feel well should not come to the hospital to visit. When you are a patient in the hospital, don't be shy about telling visitors to stay home if they are not feeling well. That's another big way we can keep infections from spreading in our hospitals.
