Sheridan, LNH partner in Math, English program

Sheridan College and Literacy North Halton (LNH) are partnering to bring a new upgrading program to Georgetown called ACE, an academic upgrading program in Math and English.

The program allows participants to get accreditation in English and Math, which will go towards a high school equivalency credit, accepted at Sheridan College for both academic programming and apprenticeships. Participants can attend on a part time basis, two nights per week, in each subject.

Those with a goal of attending Sheridan College Academic programs or who wish to achieve required math skills to go towards apprenticeship eligibility, will be able to access this program.

“It is a great opportunity for people who do not have transport to Sheridan Campus, or are available only in the evening” says Janet Gambrell, Associate Dean of Sheridan College. “We welcome the partnership with Literacy North Halton, who have been working really well to address community needs in Georgetown. This program gives people an opportunity to avail of Sheridan academic and apprenticeship program, by attending these part time programs”

Literacy North Halton will continue to provide programming for adults who wish to upgrade their literacy skills with reading, writing, math and basic computers. “The Read Spell Write program could be a perfect stepping stone for adults who wish to upgrade and attend academic programming at Sheridan, but who do not have the necessary skills to attend ACE programming at this time. LNH continues to support those who wish to improve their skills in order to help their children, get or keep a job, or increase their sense of independence.

ACE program will start in January 2007. Read Spell Write Program for adults is ongoing. For more information please call Literacy North Halton at (905) 873-2200.

PERCEPTION VS. REALITY:

How to Stay Focused on What Matters

Recently, some news coverage has focused on the downside of the economy, the dollar, oil or trade. But these short-term news events should not cause you to alter your long-term investment strategy.

Join us in January when we'll address the economic outlook for 2007, put its potential impact into perspective and help give you ideas on how to invest. Our special guest is Don Newman, veteran broadcast journalist and senior parliamentary editor for CBC News.
