50 years of marriage 'stuck to' their vows

By Frances Niblock

Forever was not an empty promise for Corry Stulp or George Vos when they wed on February 8, 1957.

The strength of that promise brought them a long and happy marriage, and it was celebrated with family and friends in Rockwood on Saturday, and again on Sunday after services at Acton's Bethel Christian Reformed Church.

Both George and Corry were young teens when their parents immigrated to Canada in 1951 and 1949, settling in the Acton area.

The couple met at a church youth group and dated for almost two years before marrying at the new Acton Christian Reformed Church; the group had met until then at Knox Presbyterian Church.

"Our basement was just done, so we were the first to be married. We didn't have a wedding party, we just walked in with Mom and Dad on both sides — they signed the papers," Corry Vos said on Friday.

In a day of failing marriages, Vos said their union lasted because they "stuck to" the promises and vows they made in front of God and friends.

That's the same advice Vos

George and Corry Vos

have her own three children and several granddaughters who have married.

"You make a promise and you gave to stick to your promise. We all have our fights, mind you. Nobody is perfect, but you stick to the promise you made and you work it out," Vos said, adding they've been fortunate and are thankful.

Three new Milton doctors

Three new family physicians have opened practices in Milton, the Halton Physician Recruitment Initiative announced this week. All three doctors are welcoming new patients.

As of February 1, Dr. Dag-Ellams and Dr. Sandhu have opened practices at the Kelso Medical Clinic on Commercial Street, Milton, and Dr. A. Kamouna has joined the Urgent Care Clinic and Family Practice on Bronte Street South.

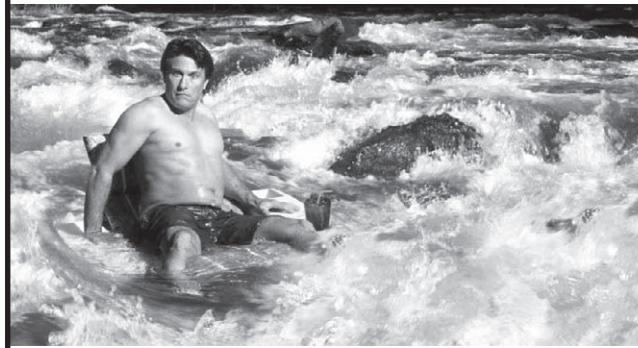

The newly-arrived family physicians learned of opportunities through Halton's Physician Recruitment Initiative which was established in 2002 to address the physician shortage in Halton. The initiative is a joint effort with representatives from the local municipalities of Halton Hills, Milton, Burlington and Oakville, local physicians and senior area hospital staff. Halton's Physician Recruiter expects that two more physicians will open practices in Milton this spring.

"With a total of five additional family physicians coming to Milton, the Town is no longer considered an underserved community by the Ministry of Health and Long Term Care," said Angela Sugden Praysner, Halton's Physician Recruiter. "However, we will be making a new application to the MOH to reflect that Milton's population has increased considerably since the last designation in 2003."
