The website mistakenly identified the Alberta couple as Maja Vermeulen and Andrew Doleman and the Gold medal winners as Helen Ramful and Justin Mohr.

Acton men charged with assault

Three Acton area men have been charged jointly with the sexual assault of a 36-year-old Georgetown woman who Halton police said was attacked in her home early Saturday morning after "socializing at a bar in Halton Hills."

"She was given a ride to her residence by three males, and at her home, three males had sexual contact with her, without her consent...the common term is gang sexual assault," said Halton Detective-Sergeant Peter Hodgson on Tuesday.

He said the victim was treated for undisclosed injuries at Nina's Place at Burlington's hospital, and released.

Charged are Nicholas

Hamer, 19, of Highway 25, south of Acton, 20-year-old Gregory McGovern of Main St. South, Acton, and Kingham Road resident Cody Wilson, 19.

All appear in a Milton court on April 23.

A 20-year-old Acton man was charged with obstructing police as they arrested Nicholas Hamer for sexual assault, about 12 hours after the incident.

The man shouted and argued with officers and opened the door of a cruiser, which could have allowed Hamer to escape. He appears in court April 18.

Truck ditched

Acton fire fighters found a propane truck in the ditch when they responded to a call at 1:43 p.m., last Wednesday afternoon on 32 Side Road near the Third Line.

The truck was pulled back onto the road without incident.
