ACTON SENIORS' RECREATION CENTRE

By JULIE CONROY

I spend a very enjoyable Monday touring four different Seniors Centres in the Golden Horseshoe area, as part of the OCAO provincial conference in Oakville. Several of our board and staff members were also at the conference attending workshops. The first Centre toured was the Sir John Colbourne Recreation Centre in Oakville, situated in a park-like setting. Second was the Burlington Seniors Centre on New Street, recently expanded. After lunch we toured the Square One Seniors Centre located in the basement of the Square One shopping Center, and last but not least, the Milton Seniors Activity Centre located in part of the old Halton Centennial Manor.

All different, and all offering many diverse programs. It gave us all lots of food for thought as to how we could improve what we offer in our own Centres in the way of programs and services.

While touring the Centres I noticed several people playing scrabble. Is anyone interested in a Scrabble Club? It could be on a Thursday morning or afternoon when the tables are all ready set up for cards. Sign the scrabble sheet if you are interested.

The dart players are looking for players on a Monday morning now the golf season is coming to a close,. Just show up if you are interested.

We had an interesting speaker on Tuesday, October 23 when John Murray shared his hobby on coin collecting and told some interesting facts, starting with the history of money and the barter system, when you would exchange what you grew or made, for other items you required, a practice still going on in some countries. Later wealthy people placed their gold in warehouses for safety, and obtained a receipt which could be used to purchase items until 1694 with the birth of the Bank of England when they started printing currency notes. Prior to this people used gold coins which they shaved to make purchases. To stop this practice the bank started to serrate the edges of the gold coins.

The name Pieces of Eight came from Spain where their gold coins were cut into pieces to purchase services and items. The practice of cutting coins in half was prevalent in the 17th and 18th century.

An interesting fact: it actually costs almost one cent to produce one cent in Canada. In the States it actually costs more than one cent so shall probably see the disappearance of our cent soon.

John also gave us a little history on the British Pound currency notes. He said people collect coins and money for many different reasons, by dates, by denominations, all one type of face value, sometimes with animal, or certain runs of numbers. So many different ways of starting an interesting hobby.

We will all be looking in our wallets with a new appreciation now.

There were 10 people carpet bowling on Monday including one new player Siena Ancker. I know they will make her very welcome. Betty Blain's Black team beat Shirley Crook's Brown team 13 - 9.

We are trying to create a new image for our newsletter, and although it will still be Acton's own with our Centre's name on the front cover, we will share a title/banner name with Georgetown. To accomplish this we will have some ballot forms at the desk and at the Christmas dinner so you will all have the chance of some input. A group from Acton and Georgetown will review the suggestions, and come up with the most suitable that reflects what our two Centres are about. Put your thinking caps on! It's no good complaining if you don't give us some ideas.

The latest newsletters should be at the Centre by the time you read this.

There were no Mooners at the Thursday afternoon bid euchre, but it was nice to see May Hoare playing again

What better way to spend a cold or rainy day than with a book. The book club meet on the last Thursday of each month. Interested, give Gerald Rennie a call.

There was no 50/50 winner this week.
